

Olivia Ababio's brief bio

Olivia Ababio is an advocate for social justice, women's empowerment, and youth development. As an international student from Ghana in Monmouth University, Olivia has worked with empowering women and youth through a training program by equipping them with skills and confidence to transform their lives. She has also worked with survivors of violence, supporting their recovery and advocating for equitable resources. Currently interning with the International Federation of Social Workers (IFSW)-UN Commission, she focuses on addressing systemic issues and uplifting marginalized communities. With experience at World Vision International, Olivia brings a global perspective to her work, promoting equity, and sustainability. Olivia is committed to inspiring future social workers, empowering women, and fostering collaboration for meaningful social change.
